

《孤儿院收养了一群树懒宝宝 呆萌惹人爱！》

With their sweet, squishy faces and lazy movements, sloths are one of the most squee-worthy animals on the Internet. Sadly, these sluggish tree-dwellers are also increasingly threatened in their native forests of Central and South America.

??

Inspired by their cuteness and a desire to make a difference, wildlife conservationist and photographer Sam Trull has dedicated her career to saving these charismatic animals.

??

Trull was first introduced to the wonderful world of sloths in 2013 after arriving in Costa Rica to work for a small wildlife rehabilitation clinic called Kids Saving the Rainforest. It wasn't long before she realized that working with orphaned sloths was her true calling.

????2013??
Rainforest"??

In August 2014, she founded The Sloth Institute Costa Rica with fellow sloth enthusiast Seda Sejud, and the pair have been rescuing, rehabilitating and releasing baby sloths ever since.

2014?8????????????????Seda Sejud?????"????????????"??

ke that?

—jiandongshi

??

??

A tiny newborn sloth cracks a smile in its sleep.

????????????????

The baby sloth shows off his adorable foot.

??????????????

That's one suave sloth!

?????????!