Police launched a massive search in Incheon on Wednesday after receiving a report from a person who had mistaken a cry of joy as a scream for help.

"I was passing by when I saw a man and a woman inside a car," said the person who made the report. "The woman suddenly shouted 'save me,' so I ran to the fire station nearby and asked for help."

More than 20 police soon arrived at the scene, but the car was gone. This made them believe there had been a kidnapping and a big search was organized to find the car.

The "kidnapping" turned out to be a couple having a passionate session of car sex. Police said the woman in question had actually shouted "Save me, please go slower."
