

《荷兰发明防加班办公桌 一到下班点就升空》

导读:在荷兰阿姆斯特丹的设计工作室Heldergroen, 员工将不会有太多机会加班。就算加班,也不是在办公室加。

Employees at Amsterdam design studio Heldergroen won't be putting in much overtime. Not in the office, at any rate.

????????????Heldergroen????????????????????,??????????

That's because every day at 6 pm, their desks, tables and other work surfaces, with their computers attached, are hauled up to the ceiling by steel cables normally used to move heavy props in theatrical productions. If you leave a half-eaten tuna sandwich on your desk, you're out of luck.

????????????6??

once the chairs and other workplace paraphernalia are cleared away, the space is free for evening and weekend use as "a dance floor, yoga studio ... or anything else you can think of—the floor is literally yours," creative director Sander Veenendaal said.

In a way, the office space itself is working overtime for Heldergroen, generating lots of publicity and carrying an enlightened message of career-life balance far and wide.

"We think that doing activities like this makes it easier for people to work here," says Veenendaal. "You know when it is time to relax or do something else that inspires you."

"??"

That sounds awesome. There's just one catch. In the morning, the desks reappear and everybody has to go back to work.
