

《双脚残疾父亲陈升宽 一路爬行寻找儿子》

导读:当地媒体报道，中国双脚残疾父亲陈升宽爬遍多个城市，寻找失踪的儿子，实在令人心碎。

In what can only be described as truly heartbreaking, Chen Shengkuan, a Chinese man with a mobility-related disability, has been moving from city to city on his hands and feet in search of his missing son, local news reports.

??

Chen's two-year-old son, Chen Zhaoyuan, went missing around 15 months ago from the family home at the Wenzhang Xi village in Chengyue, China. According to Chen, the toddler was abducted while playing with his cousins and was likely sold off to another family.

??15??

Chen has lived with a walking disability since he was a child after he was diagnosed with polio.

????????????????????????????????

A police report filed by the Chen family documented that the boy went missing in January last year. The toddler was under the care of his grandparents when he was abducted.

??1????????????????????????????????????

With the local police coming up empty, Chen quit his job at a factory making catheters and left home with his wife to conduct a broader search.

??

According to Chinese media reports, Chen's search has managed to cover his broader province and has moved to Zhanjiang, a larger city with a population of 6.9 million people.

????????????????????????????????690????

Chen's relentless hunt has now taken him to Guangdong, one of China's biggest cities. To aid him in his search, Chen carries around with him a poster with pictures of his son, detailing the incident and hoping that someone will be able to point him in the right direction.

??

Chen told Yangcheng Evening News: "No matter how hard or how much I have to suffer, I will never give up looking for my son."

????????????????"????????????????????????????"

Chen and his wife are now appealing to the media for help in locating their son.

????????????????????

Child abduction cases in China are in part fueled by families desperate for a male heir to carry on the family name.

????????????????????????????????????