Lu Gusun -- a former English professor at Shanghai's Fudan University and editor-in-chief of The English-Chinese Dictionary -- has died at the age of 76. He had been hospitalized since he was diagnosed with a cerebral hemorrhage on July 21st.

A native of Yuyao in Zhejiang Province, Lu had taught English at Fudan University since graduation. He retired about two years ago and had been working full-time on the The English-Chinese Dictionary's third edition with students and professors at the university.

Lu Gusun -- a former English professor at Shanghai's Fudan University and editor-in-chief of The English-Chinese Dictionary -- has died at the age of 76.

With more than four thousand pages, The English-Chinese Dictionary has been widely acknowledged as the best of its kind in China, and has influenced many Chinese people. Lu has translated more than two million characters, and published ten translated works including The Young Lions, The Moneychangers, and Prisoner of Second Avenue. A public memorial service for Lu will be held on August 1st, at the Shanghai Longhua Funeral Home.
