Travellers reveal the cities they will NEVER return to Cities aren't for everyone. And even fans of exciting, bustling metropolises can find some urban sprawls too extreme to enjoy when they visit.

Travellers have been sharing details of the cities they would never go back to, and some of their choices are surprising.

??

While many feature places such as Las Vegas and Dubai high on their bucket lists, those who have trodden the path instead describe bland or ugly destinations that are best avoided.

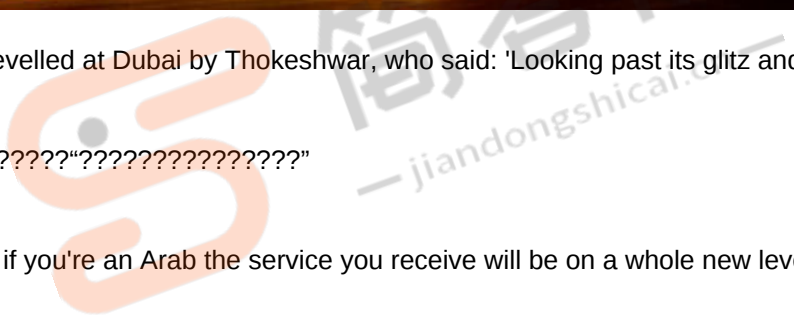

??

In a Reddit post, hundreds of disgruntled travellers named and shamed the vacation spots that they regretted wasting valuable holiday time on.

One of the biggest criticisms seemed to centre around newer cities, which were built in the last 100 years as magnets for holidaymakers.

The same was said of San Francisco in California, except the city's homeless population was criticised instead of the local cabbies.

????????????????????????????????????

One user called MyNervesHurt said: 'I hate the fact that homeless people there EXPECT people to just give them a handout, [they will] aggressively get in your face and ask for your money.'

These issues seem to pale in comparison to Nessie7's experience of the living in Cali, Columbia though.

She said of her time in the city: 'Spent two months there, and experienced eight-nine attempted robberies, and an armed robbery of the hostel I was staying at.'

Elsewhere, some cities became victims of their own success.

For example in Florence, Italy, most of the blame was directed at fellow visitors by B00mgoesthedynamit3, who said: 'It's not a bad place by any means [apart from the] hordes of tourists, lines for every attraction, people peddling stuff every two feet/people also trying to rob you..

Florence isn't alone - a town or city's popularity can often be its downfall it seems, with Corfu in Greece also criticised for being a tourist trap.

JoeyBulgaria said of the place: 'It was the most generic touristy city I've ever been to.

??JoeyBulgaria?????"????????????????"

'It didn't seem like there was anything that city had which you couldn't find a better version of in another Greek city.

'It's just salespeople selling expensive gift type things, and markets and shopping.'
