《民主党静坐抗议 众议院一片混乱》

WASHINGTON — Several dozen lawmakers led by Representatives Katherine Clark of Massachusetts and John Lewis a longtime civil rights leader disrupted the US House Wednesday by staging a sit-in on the floor of the chamber to demand that the Republican leadership allow votes on gun legislation.

The protest — over bills blocked by House leaders that would expand background checks and attempt to prevent suspected terrorists from buying guns — came more than a week after the Orlando nightclub massacre the country's worst mass shooting in modern history with 49 victims.

House Speaker Paul Ryan the chamber's top Republican dismissed the sit-in as a "publicity stunt'' in a CNN interview and said the House GOP had no intention of passing measures that he said would erode gun ownership rights.
