

《离婚房子怎么分？可拆分式漂浮屋让分手更省心》

导读:一家公司别出心裁地提出了一个能让离婚夫妇避免房产争夺战的设计——将房屋一分为二，漂浮的独立单元设计能让劳燕分飞的两人真正“相忘于江湖”。

With divorce rates steadily increasing, some newlyweds are drawing up prenuptial agreements before tying the knot.

????????????????????????????????????

But one firm has set out to help divorcees avoid a real estate battle with a new design that easily splits the home in two - and lets them sail away from each other.

????????????????????????????????????——????????????????????????????????????“?????”?

Called Prenuptial Housing, this floating house consists of two independent structures that separate if the couple should split up, resulting in two equal units that can float away from each other.

????????????“?????”??

The units are initially (pre)fabricated as independent carbon fiber units for which we designed a simple solid connecting system; detaching this system means unlocking the connection and requires no unique tools,’ Xander den Duijn with Studio OBA, the design firm behind Prenuptial Housing, told DailyMail.com in an email.

The units should (dis)connect without much effort. Though this is part of the design that is still under development.'

"????????????????????????????????????"

The idea for the 'break up' home was conceived by Omar Kbiri, co-founder of Maak, who had the revelation while looking for a new home with his girlfriend.

??

With the increasing number of divorces each year, our concept is – regrettably – becoming more and more relevant,' said Kbir, who is also a self-proclaimed PR and pop culture expert.

"???"

With this concept you namely don't need to relocate after a break-up.

"????????????????????"

The duo currently has their eyes set on countries in the EU that have the highest divorce rate, which include Portugal (68 percent), Belgium (71 percent) and Hungary (67 percent).

????????????????????????????????68%??????71%??????67%??

The blueprints of this floating home describe the home as consisting of two independent prefabricated structures, which appear to be fused as one, that are easily split in two once the couple decides to pull the plug.

??? "???"?

When couples feel they are drifting apart, the house initiates a 'break up', by detaching the two units which then go solo on the water,' reads Studio OBA's website regarding Prenuptial Housing.

Kbiri is currently in discussions with several investors regarding funding for the design.

????????????????????

And Studio OBA hopes to build the prototype in the near future and open orders by early 2017.

OBA????????????????2017???????

The costs of the house completely depends. The house as it is on the images is still a concept. This means that the way the house eventually is going to look depends on the wishes/requirements of the client.
