A kitten has been born with eyes so big he is unable to close them when he sleeps and has a permanently startled expression.

????????????????????????????????????

Five-month-old cat Herman lives with his doting owner Shirley in the Danish capital Copenhagen and acts like any other pet.

However, his massive bulbous eyes are so big that he cannot completely close his eyelids - even when he is sleeping.

His owner added: "Herman is always following me from room to room.

'There is literally no privacy left since I got Herman - whether I am sleeping, cooking dinner or even going to the bathroom, Herman is always around.

But despite his unique appearance, Herman is like any other kitten and is happiest playing with his favourite shoelace or one of Shirley's shoes.

The quirky kitten is adored by both his owner and his growing Instagram fan base, which has given him the nickname 'Hermie'.

She said: 'Herman loves shoes. One day I heard some weird sounds. Herman had stuck his head into a shoe and got it stuck.

'He ran around panicking with a shoe on his head. He has never since stuck his head into one of my shoes.'

Other cats who have been born with large eyes, have later been diagnosed with spontaneous lens luxation.

This sees the lens detach from the rest of the eye for no known reason, meaning some pets suffering from the condition have to undergo surgery.
