Shi Changhong, a designer from southern China's Guizhou province, recently became an Internet icon. Shi spent two years sketching "business cards" for 34 cities and provinces in China. His illustrations incorporate each province's name and most representative spots to create a design that the artist hopes can be appreciated by even those with no formal background in art. Chinese netizens have praised his work, remarking that people could learn a lot about China just by looking through the cards.
