《“女生骂人嫁不出去”是直男癌？你怎么看？》

导读:近日安徽淮南师范学院一则“女生今天骂人，明朝怎么嫁人”的横幅使得该校被多人诟病，网友围绕“女生能不能骂人”的问题吵得不可开交。

A college in East China’s Anhui Province has been at the center of public attention since a photo went viral showing a banner hung on campus which claims women who speak ill of others will not be able to find husbands.

????????????????????????“????????”?????????????

"If a woman calls someone a name today, how could she get married? Even if she marries a nice person, how can she teach her children good manners," read the banner hung on the campus of Huainan Normal University (HNU), images of which were uploaded to Sina Weibo by a HNU student.

??“????????????????????????????”

The photo shows that the banner was signed by the college’s student affairs office.

???????????????“???”?

The banner triggered controversy online, with some netizens arguing that the banner shows that a patriarchal, sexist mindset is still common in China.

??

"So the purpose of being polite for a woman is to find a nice person to marry, instead of for her self-improvement? The banner in the campus is inappropriate as it hints at the education policy of the college," wrote Weibo user fengqilianyi.

????“????”???“??”

"Why specifically highlight women? Is it proper for men to say rude words?" wrote Net user junmeng.

??“junmeng”???“?????????????????????”

Other Net users argued that critics are overreacting and claimed that this kind of behavior should be curbed.

????????????????????????????????????

The HNU responded in its official Sina Weibo on Wednesday that it had removed the banner.

????????????????????????????????????

The college added that they authorized the student affairs office to design several banners to promote a "civilized atmosphere" after they found some students using "uncivilized language."

??????????????????????“??????”????????????????????“????”?