Hundreds of thousands rallied on Saturday to demand her resignation.

????????????????

South Korean news agency Yonhap quoted officials as saying Ms Park's questioning should take place no later than Wednesday.

Lee Jae-Yong, vice chairman of Samsung Electronics, was questioned over whether Ms Park pressured the company into donating millions to foundations controlled by her friend Ms Choi.

Ms Choi is accused of trying to extort huge sums of money from South Korean companies and is under arrest on charges of fraud and abuse of power.

??

She is suspected of using her friendship with Ms Park to solicit business donations for a non-profit fund she controlled.

On Sunday, the presidential office said Ms Park was "earnestly considering ways to normalise state affairs" and that she had "heard the voices of the people at the rally".

??

She apologised earlier in November for putting "too much faith in a personal relationship".

She said wrongdoing would be punished, and that she was prepared to be investigated by prosecutors.

????????????????????????????????????

South Korea's constitution does not allow a sitting president to be prosecuted, but investigations are permissible.

????????????????????????????

Ms Park has 15 months left in her term. If she steps down elections must be held within 60 days.
