

《日本游客澳洲冲浪遇上自然界“头号杀手”，苦撑16个小时终于获救》

导读:一位日本冲浪者在澳大利亚海滩被急流卷走，在海上度过了一个晚上，最终被一艘集装箱船的船员救了上来。”

A Japanese surfer who spent a night at sea clinging to his surfboard has been rescued by the crew of a container ship off the east coast of Australia.

??

The 37-year-old told police a current had pulled him out to sea off Bulli Beach, 80km (50 miles) south of Sydney on Thursday evening.

??37????????????????????????????80??50????Bulli????????

Sailors on the MSC Damla spotted him floating about 6km offshore and pulled him on board using a lifebuoy.

MSC Damla????????????6????????????????

They gave him food, drink and warm clothing and contacted the authorities.

????????????????????

A pilot vessel from Port Kembla returned him to shore. He was taken to hospital but discharged shortly afterwards.

??Kembla????????????????????????????

The man was in "remarkably good spirits", MSC Australia's managing director Kevin Clarke said.

???“?????”?MSC????????????Kevin Clarke??

"Our crew are always being observant of marine traffic, but it is exceptionally fortunate they were able to spot this man waving for help from his surf board," he said.

“??”??

The man had spent six hours trying to paddle back to shore before running out of energy, Inspector Darren Wood said.

???Darren Wood????????????????????????

He is estimated to have spent about 16 hours in the water but temperatures only dropped to 21 degrees during the night, preventing him from getting hypothermia, the Australian broadcaster ABC reported.

????????????16????????????21????????????ABC???

The safety organisation Surf Life Saving New South Wales said surfers should tell other people of their plans before setting out and be aware of local conditions, ABC said.

“????????”“????”?Surf Life Saving????????????????