"Give us a problem and we'll drag your ass off the plane, and if you resist, we'll beat you so badly you'll be using your own face as a flotation device."

Kimmel himself also directly took aim at the airline during the show, joking that the forcible removal was reminiscent of his mother getting him out of bed back in school days.

He added: "I don't even understand this, by the way. I've been to 100 games in stadiums with 50,000 seats, they never sell the seat two times to one person, but for some reason, airlines cannot figure this out."

For Kimmel, one of the worst aspects of the whole furore was the way United Airlines CEO Oscar Munoz dealt with the situation.

In a statement released via Twitter, Mr Munoz said: "This is an upsetting event to all of us here at United. I apologise for having to re-accommodate these customers..." "He said 're-accommodate.' This is like when we re-accommodated El Chapo in Mexico," Kimmel joked.

In a second statement later in the day, Mr Munoz apologised to employees, "I'm sorry. We will fix this."

"No one should ever be mistreated this way," he wrote. "I want you to know that we take full responsibility and we will work to make it right."
