

《11个小故事告诉你们，为何他们忍痛纹身！》

导读:一直以来，很多国人难以接受纹身。但是，这在国外却十分盛行。下面我们一起来看一下文中11个小伙伴的纹身故事。

"This is my most recent tattoo and the biggest of them all. I had been wanting to get a Hamsa for the longest time but was waiting to find the perfect artist that could pull off the detail I wanted on it. The Hamsa is used in many religions and it's believed to protect you from evil/bad energies. I think we all need some extra protection from time to time so I have this kickass tattoo to protect me day in and day out." —Conz Preti

"I have a 'Team Greengrass' on my right bicep — it's my family's multiple sclerosis charity. I was diagnosed with MS eight years ago. My family, led by my wife Carla and oldest daughter, Aly, made the decision to become advocates for MS. Team Greengrass has raised over $150K for MS!" —Joel Greengrass

Harry Potter was my best (and sometimes only) friend growing up. The stories had such an impact on me. No matter what happens in my life, I can always count on Harry Potter to make me feel at home again. This tattoo, as stereotypical as it is, represents the bond that I have with these books that will never be broken.—Lara Parker

There's an Italian espresso maker and cup of coffee tattooed on my side. I'm an Italian-American with a father who was born in Italy, so these little stovetop espresso makers were a prominent feature in my childhood!—Emmy Favilla

It's a partial quotation from the last line of Richard Ellman's biography of James Joyce. It just means that you should try to find the humor in every situation, especially bad ones. —Joe Bernstein

I got this after a really REALLY, really bad breakup. I needed to cover up a silly tattoo we had gotten together and decided to do so with a diamond because they are unbreakable. It's a nice reminder that if I was able to live through that and come out strong, I will be fine, no matter what. —Conz Preti

I always wanted a tattoo but was too scared. But after having two kids, I figured I could endure anything and so I got my first tattoo at 38. I now have three, but I love the second one that I got for my 40th birthday the most.
—Allison Lucas

I got it this summer. It's my first. It consists of California poppies, lupines and blackberries, all wildflowers that remind me of the Northern California town where I grew up. I haven't lived there in nearly a decade so this artwork helps me feel connected to my beautiful rural home. —Sandra Allen

I've lived all over the world and love to travel, the anchor is both a reminder of being able to stay put in one place but also move around when necessary. The phrase is from a song and it reads 'I travel the world.' —Conz Preti

It was Friday the 13th, tattoo parlors offer $13 dollar tattoos, and with my friends we thought, Why not? So... I got the simplest yet toughest knot. —Conz Preti

I have two swallows on the back of my thighs that say "love" and "luck," respectively. A little of both is what all you need to live a satisfying life." —Emmy Favilla
