A Beijing suburb is gearing up to host the Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation, as the local government and residents welcome another opportunity to shine from a high-profile event.

Chinese President Xi Jinping will host the summit in Huairou district's Yanqi Lake area from May 14 to 15. At Xi's invitation, 28 heads of state and government will attend the forum, the Xinhua News Agency reported.

The government chose Huairou to host the forum partly out of safety concerns, Niu Fengrui, a research fellow at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, told the Global Times Monday.

Compared with the city center, Huairou has fewer people and buildings, which makes it easier to secure, Niu noted. This also means daily life would not be disrupted, he said.

The government's website says that as of the end of 2012, the district was home to 389,000 people, one of Beijing's least dense districts.

Aside from safety concerns, Huairou's rich natural resources and good environment make it ideal to host big international events, Niu said. Boasting mountains and lakes in Beijing's northern suburbs, Huairou serves as the city's ecological conservation and development zone.

Forests cover 53.41 percent of the district, the highest among all Beijing districts. Over 97.1 percent of the district is considered a protected zone for drinking water resources.
