"I am very proud to join UNICEF China as Special Advocate for Education ? it's not only an honour but also a responsibility. From this day on, I will be more active in promoting education and development for China's children, and do as much practical work as I can...Education is a right; we should never allow it to be a privilege. Let's work hard to make education even better in the future." Wang Yuan remarked at the announcement event at UNICEF's Beijing office.

UNICEF works with the Government of China to promote and support high quality education for all of China's children. It works with partners to implement Child Friendly School model in remote and disadvantaged areas of China. A child friendly school is one that is designed for the best interests of the child. UNICEF believes that children come first and every child, no matter who they are, no matter what part of China they come from, has a right to high quality education.
