

《原来，早在西周时就已经有 ” 无线路由器 ” 啦》

据安徽博物院官网介绍显示，该“路由器状”文物“不见于诸家著录，用途待考”，戏称它为“西周路由器”，作为娱乐调侃一下也未尝不可。

An article about a router-like artifact in ancient China recently went viral online, Chinanews.com reported on Wednesday.

??

This unique bronze ware features five round columns standing on a square base at an equal distance between each other, strongly resembling a Wi-Fi router with five tentacles in the eyes of modern people. Some net users even nicknamed it the “West Zhou Dynasty router.”

??

This 31-centimeter-high piece unearthed in 1959 can be dated back to the West Zhou Dynasty, over 3,000 years ago. The national-level cultural relic and national treasure is housed in central China’s Anhui Museum.

????31????1959????????3000????????????????????

????????????????“????”???“????????????????”?

??

1959

????????????????????

????????????????????????????????“?????”????????????????