Another added: "If students are not in class, of course they will not know their teachers’ names, so it’s a good question to ask!"

Hu Teng, a teacher at the institute, told Beijing broadcaster BTime that it was the first time such a question had been introduced in a class. he said.

The original intention of this was to assess students’ general attitude towards study. We wanted to see whether students have worked hard in class… and whether they have been paying attention to details. If they can’t even remember their teacher’s name, then they clearly have no interest in the curriculum.
