《“限时抢购”用英语怎么说？》

A: Ah, I miss shopping in the night markets in China! I loved the give and take of haggling with the merchants to get the best deal possible.

B: Really? I was always so intimidated and felt like I was getting ripped off. I think I would rather just pay whatever is on the price tag...

A: You are such a baby! ??????????????

B: Well, bargaining is not my strong point. Generally I just go online and look for flash sales, which are a lot cheaper than the ticket price.

A: Because I'm your friend I'm going to give you the facts: you have zero strong points. But you just mentioned a really good word, flash sale! ??????????????!

?????????flash sale, flash is spelled f-l-a-s-h, flash, sale is spelled s-a-l-e, sale, flash sale. Flash sale??????????????????Accessories are among the most sought after items on flash sale sites. ??????????????????Flash sale websites claim to offer deep discounts on brand products to attract consumers. ???????????????????????The new flash sale site is targeting young mothers with small children at home. ??flash sale, flash sale, flash sale...

A: ??????????????????????????????????! ??????????????????

B: Exactly, It's an old marketing trick. They create a false sense of urgency so the buyer doesn't have time to talk themselves out of the purchase.

A: Exactly. Sometimes the companies try to gloss over any defects the product has, which is probably why they are so cheap in the first place!
