《阿美石油公司取代苹果,成为最有价值公司》

Apple is toppled by oil giant Saudi Aramco as themost valuable listed company.

??????????????????????????

In the largest initial public offering in history, astate-owned oil and gas behemoth in Saudi Arabiabecame the most valuable publicly traded companyin the world.

Saudi Arabian Oil Co., aka Saudi Aramco, has justpriced its shares at $8.53, which the Wall StreetJournal reports is on the higher end of its target range. That figure would give Saudi Aramco astaggering valuation of $1.7 trillion, overtaking Apple's current market value of $1.15 trillion.

Having raised $25.6 billion, the IPO's dollar value also easily eclipsed the current record-holder, China's Alibaba, which raised $25 billion back in 2014.

Toppling American and Chinese tech giants in the record books is clearly a symbolic coup forSaudi crown prince Mohammed bin Salman, but as R-euters points out, the valuation will stillfall significantly short of his sought-after goal of $2 trillion. (Of course, it's not too late to start a$300 billion GoFundMe.)
