World Cup fever and Neymarmania have literally gone to some Brazilians' heads.

Fourteen barbers work seven days a week at the barbershop lying between the Manguinhos and Jacarezinho favelas, as Brazilian slums are known.

The house special is the "jaca cut." Invented a decade ago in the nearby Jacare slum, the hair is shaved around the ears and neck, leaving the top longer.

??????????“???”??

But customers can get variations on the cut, courtesy of Marcelo Ferreira, the barbershop's 22-year-old "craque" -- or whiz.

With a razor, Ferreira will turn a neck into Neymar's face, Brazil's flag, the tournament's armadillo mascot Fuleco or the six stars representing the sixth World Cup title that the nation hopes to capture.
