Passage:

Mark and his classmates visited a local museum as part of their school trip. They were excited to explore the exhibits and learn about the history and culture of their city. The museum had collections of ancient artifacts, paintings by famous artists, and interactive displays.

As they walked through the museum, Mark noticed a section dedicated to dinosaurs. He was fascinated by the massive skeletons and life-size models of different species. Mark spent a long time reading about their habitats and behaviors.

Next, they entered the art gallery, where they saw beautiful paintings and sculptures. Mark admired the skill and creativity of the artists. He particularly enjoyed a painting of a serene landscape and a sculpture of a graceful dancer.

Before leaving the museum, Mark and his classmates visited the interactive science exhibit. They conducted experiments, learned about physics and chemistry, and even created their own mini volcano eruption.
