Many people would like to travel to Europe, but they don't have enough money for the trip. This is especially true for Americans, as the exchange rate between the US dollar and the euro is not good. However, there is a way for Americans to travel to Europe for less money. It's called the "Continent on $5 a Day" book.

The book, written by Arthur Frommer, offers tips and advice on how to travel around Europe on a budget. Frommer provides information on everything from where to stay to what to eat and what to see. He also includes information on the exchange rate and how to use it to your advantage.

One of the most important things that Frommer suggests is to use public transportation. He explains that using public transportation is a cost-effective way to see Europe. He also suggests that people avoid using taxis and rental cars if they can help it.

Another tip Frommer offers is to stay away from tourist traps. He explains that there are many popular tourist attractions in Europe that are overpriced and not worth visiting. Instead, he suggests that people visit local landmarks and experience local culture.

Finally, Frommer suggests that people try local cuisine. He explains that by eating local food, you can save money and experience the culture of the region you are visiting. By following these tips, Americans can save money and make their trip to Europe more enjoyable.
