The KiwiBurger

McDonald’s introduced the KiwiBurger in New Zealand back in 1991. Just check out what goes inside it: beef, tomato, lettuce, onions, beetroot, egg and of course kiwi… What? There’s no actual kiwi fruit in this? Really? Huh. But it’s called KiwiBurger, right? Oh man, I can’t exactly explain why.

The McLobster

From: parts of Canada, New England

The McLobster is a lobster sandwich. Its primary ingredients are lobster and bread. The sandwich has actually been around for a couple of years and at one time there were even plans to introduce it to restaurants nationwide. But someone realized that it would impossible to convince Middle American landlocked states that their “lobster” isn’t actually 2 weeks old.

McRice Burger

From: Taiwan, Singapore, Indonesia, Philippines etc.

Another example of McDonald’s international menu is the Asian rice burger. No, it’s not rice between two pieces of bread. That would be silly. It’s rice formed into buns with beef or chicken between them, which makes a lot more sense. You know how people are always complaining that you can’t eat rice with your hands.
