

《华人群星闪耀第66届戛纳电影节》

华人群星闪耀第66届戛纳电影节

China has three movies entering the 66th Cannes Film Festival, which kicked off Wednesday evening (Beijing Time), and three Chinese or Chinese American judges appear on the various juries.

266????????15????????????????????????????????????

One of Hollywood's most accomplished directors, Steven Spielberg, is heading the jury panel this year. He and eight other members, including Nicole Kidman and Ang Lee, will decide who wins the Palme d'Or.

????????????????????--????????????????-????????????8????????????

Chinese actress Zhang Ziyi has been appointed as a member of judging panel in the Un Certain Regard section. Chinese movie critic Luo Jin has also been invited to be a judge for France 4 Visionary Award, making him the first Chinese movie critic to be a judge for a top-ranking film festival.

?????????"????"?????????????????"????"????????????????????????

Chinese director Jia Zhangke's "A Touch of Sin", which revolves around the lives of four common Chinese citizens, became the first mainland Chinese film to compete for the top prize in three years.

??4????????????

Actors Jiang Wu, Wang Baoqiang and Zhao Tao, who star in Jia's film, are also expected to compete for the best actor and actress awards.

????????????????????????????????

Appearing alongside Jia in Cannes is Hong Kong film maker Johnnie To, who will show his crime feature "Blind Detective" as an out-of-competition film in the midnight screening section.

??"????"????

Hong Kong director Flora Lau's film "Bends" has been selected to compete in the Un Certain Regard section.

????????????????????"????"????

????????66????????????????

