Ladies and gentlemen,

According to a recent study, active listening is crucial in resolving conflicts and misunderstandings. It fosters empathy and understanding, which are the pillars of any healthy relationship. By actively listening, we show respect and genuine interest in what others have to say.

Moreover, being a good listener also means being patient. It's about giving others enough time to express their thoughts and feelings without interrupting. This not only helps in gaining their trust but also enhances our own emotional intelligence.
