

《分手后的“离婚返巢族”》

As much as we love our parents, it's probably fair to say most of us would prefer not to move back in once we've left home.

??

But more than seven million Britons - dubbed the 'doomerangers' - have been forced to do exactly that after a break-up because they can't afford to live on their own, a survey found.

??????????700??“?????”?

And unlike the 'boomerang generation', who return to the family home not long after flying the nest, the 'doomerangers' are fully grown adults, often with spouses and children.

??“?????”?????“?????”????????????????????????????????????“?????”????????????????????????

In fact, according to the survey of 505 people who had moved back with their parents, a quarter had done so following a bad break-up, saying they needed distance or independence from their ex-partner.

??????505??

And no matter how much we would like to be independent, rising rent and mortgage costs mean many of us are left with no choice but to return, however reluctantly, to the family nest.

??

