

When you go to Rob Ferrel for a haircut, you know you ' re in for something really special. The professional hair artist can sculpt logos, designs, patterns and even celebrity faces on a head of hair. He runs his own salon called Rob the Original Barbershop, in San Antonio, where he works his magic every single day.

A person is holding a tablet displaying a portrait of Steve Jobs. The person's arm, which is visible in the foreground, has a large, detailed tattoo of Steve Jobs' face. The tattoo is a realistic, black and white portrait of Steve Jobs, showing his characteristic round glasses, beard, and mustache. The person holding the tablet is wearing a black wristband. The background is dark and out of focus, showing some papers and a water bottle on a desk.

“From there I started doing stars and more complex designs, team logos” he said. “And then I wanted to do something different and stand out, so I did portraits. Now if they bring me any image, I can replicate it in their hair”. Back in 2006, Ferrel’s clients had to bring him images of the portraits they wanted, but now, with the help of

[illegible][illegible]

??????????30?45???“????????????????????????????????”?????“????????????????????????????????”??’????????????”

Some of Ferrel's most regular clientele include football and basketball fans who want their favorite players etched into their hair. With the Football World Cup fever still lingering in the air, Ferrel's latest hair carvings have been of players Cristiano Ronaldo, Guillermo Ochoa, and Tim Howard with an American flag in the background.

????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????C????????????????????????????

And when his local basketball team San Antonio Spurs played Miami Heat in the NBA finals in July, several fans of both teams came in requesting styles with basketball themes.

?????NBA????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????

