广东暴雨导致山体滑坡，已确认6人死亡，1人受伤，当地当局周五说。

GUANGZHOU - Six people have been confirmed dead and another one injured in a rain-triggered landslide in South China's Guangdong province, local authorities said on Friday.

The landslide occurred around 5 pm on Thursday in Longshi village, Heping county in the city of Heyuan, leaving two dead, two injured and three others missing, according to the county government.

Over 200 village officials, local soldiers and members of the militia joined the rescue work.

The bodies of the three missing people were retrieved early on Friday morning. One of the injured victims died after medical treatment failed, the county government said.

Heavy rain has battered the province over the past three days. A landslide also killed two residents and injured three children on Tuesday in Huaiji county in the city of Zhaoqing.
