

《第十届国际新闻摄影比赛获奖名单揭晓》

第十届国际新闻摄影比赛获奖名单揭晓

第十届国际新闻摄影比赛评选结果已经公布。加拿大摄影记者凯文·弗赖尔拍摄的《台风海燕》夺得年度新闻照片大奖。

The winners of the 10th China International Press Photo contest have been unveiled. A Canadian photographer has taken top honors in the competition, winning "Picture of the Year" for an image shot during the aftermath of Typhoon Haiyan, which struck the Philippines last year.

The prime prize in the 10th China International Press Photo contest goes to Beijing-based Canadian photographer Kevin Frayer, for a black-and-white shot of a woman sitting amid buildings demolished by Typhoon Haiyan.

Canadian photographer Kevin Frayer's black-and-white shot of a woman sitting amid buildings demolished by Typhoon Haiyan. (Xinhua)

Frayer's photo story also wins the gold medal in the "War and Disaster News Stories" category.

Frayer's photos have been selected from more than 30,000 pictures shot by over 3,000 photographers from 60 countries and regions.

The annual event was initiated by the China Photojournalists Society in 2005. After a decade of growth, the contest has become a popular event among photojournalists and professionals from China and abroad.

"The contest provides a platform for photojournalists all over the world to communicate and exchange ideas. It also helps China to express its views to the world," said Huang Wen from China Photojournalists Society.

An award ceremony will be held in October this year, accompanied by the debut exhibition of the winning photos.

A winning photo in the 10th China International Press Photo contest by Hua Jian.

A winning photo in the portrait category of the 10th China International Press Photo contest by Yin Yonghong.

