Breakfast kiosks to be removed in Haidian

Breakfast kiosks in Beijing's Haidian district will be gradually removed as local government attempts to curb increasingly rampant urban issues such as unlicensed operations and food safety, news site bjnews.com said on Thursday.

A new breakfast project will be launched after the removal of the breakfast kiosks, the report said, citing government officials from Haidian.

The district is likely to introduce settled breakfast stores in cooperation with large food chain enterprises, it said.
