Woman's poor driving skill damages house

A woman in Wenzhou seriously damaged her parents' house when she drove to visit them in her new car, Wenzhou Evening News reported on Sunday.

The woman, surnamed Ye, who was accompanied by her husband and child on July 16, crashed into a structural pillar of her parents' house and broke it, causing the two-story house to collapse. No one was injured. The traffic police who investigated said Ye's poor driving skills contributed to the accident. She got her driver's license in December 2013 and has driven a car infrequently in past six months, they said.
