《双语：英国警方在线拍卖赃物净赚27万英镑》

A police force has raked in over £270,000 in the past year by selling confiscated goods on the online action website ebay.

??????Ebay??????????????????27???????????

Leicestershire police became the first force in the country to use ebay to sell the seized assets of criminals which included flashy sports cars and designer jewellery.

???????????????ebay?????????????????????????

The items that were auctioned off included luxury cars, computers and clothing which the courts confirmed had been paid for with criminal cash.

????????????????????????????????

All the money the site generates will go back to fund crime-fighting work. Leicestershire police said it hopes it will prevent criminals from benefiting from their loot.

??

Many of the items were confiscated thanks to tip-offs from the public, who became suspicious of people who were living the high life despite having no obvious legitimate income.

??????????????????????????——??????????????????

In the past year, it has sold an Aston Martin DB9 car for £63,000, an Audi A5 for £29,500 and a Range Rover for £15,500 and a Mercedes car for £7,751.

????????ebay?6?3000?????????DB9???2?9500??????A5??1?5500?????????7751?????????

Meanwhile, police sold a Rolex watch online for more than £13,000 and a signed autograph by legendary crooner Frank Sinatra was snapped up for £260.

???????????1?3000??260??

Paul Wenlock, head of Leicestershire Police's economic crime unit, said the site had been a 'huge success'.

???????????????·??????????“?????”?

简答网 —jiandongshicai.cn—