Shi Xingying had been going over a zebra crossing and was about to go through a green light when she narrowly avoided being sandwiched between two vehicles, in the southern coastal city Wuxi last month.

??

In the clip, a silver car crosses the intersection and was turning left when a yellow truck comes in from the opposite direction and the duo smash into to each other at high speed.

??

Somehow the tuk tukdriver, who was just metres from the impact, managed to dodgethe collision which would have likely killed her.

'I was going across the street in front of green lights and I didn't expect that the two vehicles would whoosh towards me suddenly,' said Shi, who is in her 60s.

??

The cleaner, who works for a service company, recalled that she had slowed down to observe traffic situation nearby when she approached the green light.

??

According to local traffic police, both vehicles should have slowed down as they approached the intersection though ultimately the silver car, which was turning, should have given way to the oncoming truck.

??

Both vehicles swerved to avoid the tuk tuk while the three-wheeler performed a death-defying 180 degree turn to steer clear of the violent collision.
