《英国首相被7年级女孩提问难倒 围观是什么问题？》

So far David Cameron has been grilled by the finest journalistic minds including the BBC ’ s former grand inquisitor Jeremy Paxman on this general election campaign. But it took a question from a Year 7 called Reema, who is from Salford, Greater Manchester, on the BBC ’ s children ’ s television programme Newsround to leave the Prime Minister unable to find answer.

???????????·??????????????????????????BBC?????·???????????????BBC??????Newsround????????????7????????????????????

The question was: “If you could pick one politician apart from yourself to win who would it be and why?” Mr Cameron, shifting uncomfortably, answered: “Wow. If I could pick politician? Would they have to be living or dead?”

????“????????????????????????????????”????????????????????“????????????????????”

He continued: “If I thought someone else should win the election I would not be standing myself, so I can’t really answer the question about who else I would like to win. There are lots of candidates around the country I am very enthusiastic about. I am afraid it is too difficult to say I would like someone else to win other than me or I wouldn’t be here, and I am quite keen on winning.”

???????“??
????????”

As Mr Cameron got up to leave he said: “Top question – it is the best one I have been asked all election campaign.”

?????????????“?????——?????????????????????”

Vocabulary

grill??????

inquisitor????