In its travel alert for US citizens, the State Department warns of the dangers of militant attacks throughout Europe.

????????????????????????????????

While it routinely issues travel alerts for short-term risks worldwide, this is only the third time in 20 years one has been issued for Europe.

??

The attacks could hit tourist sites, restaurants, commercial centres and transportation, the State Department warns, with large events such as Euro 2016 singled out.

Britain's Foreign Office has warned of a high threat from terrorism in France.

????????????????????????

Asked if it wanted to comment on the warning from the US, it said it had specific advice for football fans travelling to the competition.

??

France's state of emergency was extended to include the tournament, and it also plans to deploy anti-drone technology as another precaution.

??

More than 90,000 police, soldiers and private security agents are being deployed as well.
