Authorities in northern India said that they have arrested three men, including two police officers, suspected of gang-raping and killing two teenage sisters.

Villagers found the girls' bodies hanging from a tree on Wednesday morning, hours after they disappeared near their home in Katra village within the Uttar Pradesh state. Police said that the girls, who were 14 and 15, had been gang-raped and strangled before being hanged. Hundreds of angry villagers spent the rest of Wednesday in silent protest over alleged police inaction in the case.

Police arrested the three men later in the day and are still searching for four more suspects.
