Fudan University yesterday admitted its youngest student for the academic year, 14-year-old XiaoYuhe.

Beijing native Yuhe will be joined by two other students who are just months older at the renowned city university.

Yuhe has been admitted by the School of Mathematical Sciences, and yesterday moved into his dormitory in Yangpu District, which he will share with older roommates.

"It is my dream to study in the school of mathematics at Fudan as I've been interested in mathematics since I was very young," he told reporters.

Yuhe was admitted by the university after scoring 692 out of 750 in the national college entrance exam in June. He scored the maximum 150 for math.
