导读:叙利亚暴力冲突五年来，这个昔日宁静的阿拉伯国家变得动荡不安，民不聊生。近日，美俄两国外长在瑞士日内瓦展开对话，达成了相关停火协议，也给这个国家带来了一丝希望。

Under the plan, the Syrian government will end combat missions in specified areas held by the opposition.

Russia and the US will establish a joint centre to combat so-called Islamic State and al-Nusra fighters.

The announcement follows talks between US Secretary of State John Kerry and his Russian counterpart, Sergei Lavrov.

????????·????????·????????????????

The plan would need both the regime and opposition "to meet their obligations", Mr Kerry said in Geneva.

????????????????????"?????"

The opposition had indicated it was prepared to comply with the plan, he said, provided the Syrian government "shows it is serious".

Mr Lavrov said Russia had informed the Syrian government about the arrangements and the Syrian government was "ready to fulfil them".

The accord also provides for humanitarian access.

????????????????????

"The cessation of hostilities requires access to all besieged and hard-to-reach areas, including Aleppo", Mr Kerry said.

?????"????????????????????????"

Seven days after the start of the cessation of hostilities, Russia and the US will establish a "joint implementation centre" to fight the Islamic State group and al-Qaeda-allied Nusra fighters.

????????????????????"?????"????????????????

Mr Lavrov said the joint implementation centre would allow Russian and US forces to "separate the terrorists from the moderate opposition."

????????????????????"?????????????????"

He said there would be co-ordinated strikes against the terrorists by the Russian and US air forces.

????????????????????????????

"We have agreed on the areas where such co-ordinated strikes would be taking place, and in those areas only the Russian and US air force will be functional," he said.

?????"??"

But Mr Lavrov added that "the Syrian air force will be functional in other areas, outside those that we have singled out for Russian-American military co-operation."
