An aerial photograph of the Zhusheng Pagoda, a tall, multi-tiered traditional Chinese structure with dark tiled roofs and ornate eaves. The pagoda is situated on a hill, surrounded by a dense forest of green trees. A red carpeted path leads up to the base of the pagoda, where a large crowd of people is gathered. The background shows more forested hills under a clear sky.

Six Harmonies Pagoda, or Liuhe Pagoda, is a masterpiece of ancient Chinese architecture. It was first built to calm the tides of the Qiantang River in the Northern Song Dynasty (960-1127), drawing its name “Six Harmonies” from Buddhist teachings. Today, it serves as an ideal lookout point over the Qiantang River.
