《2016美国大选第三场辩论：川普又歧视女性？》

Hillary Clinton was explaining her plans to raise taxes on the wealthy when she pointedly referred to Trump’s possible tax avoidance: "My social security payroll contribution will go up, as will Donald’s, assuming he can’t figure out how to get out of it."

??????????????????????????????????“??????????????????????????????????????”

Trump’s retort? "Such a nasty woman."

?????????????“(???)??????????”

It quickly became one of the defining quotes of the night on social media.

??????????????????????????

Within an hour, around a quarter of a million tweets mentioned the phrase "nasty woman". Soon female Clinton supporters - along with a few men - were claiming the phrase as their own.

???????????25???????“?????”??????????????--?????????--???????????

Hundreds linked the comment to another Trump utterance which inspired online rage, his description of some illegal immigrants as "bad hombres".

??????????????????????????????????--??????????“???”?

Some of Trump’s supporters defended the remark. Diamond and Silk, two African-American women who have built a huge Twitter following through their support of the Republican candidate, tweeted: "Yes she is. Hillary can care less about the betterment of the American people. She had 30 years."

????????????????????????????????????????????“?????”??????“????????????!????????????????????????
?”

"Hillary is a nasty woman. There are nasty men and nasty women. Uh, is this complicated?" tweeted conservative radio presenter Mark Levin.

??????????·???????????“????????????????????????????????????”

Others threw up their hands at yet another presidential debate that descended into personal attacks rather than keeping to the issues.

????????????????????????????????????????????