

《Obama unveils executive actions to curb gun violence》

US President Barack Obama has unveiled a handful of executive measures to tighten gun control measures and curb gun violence. With the new rules, he requires more gun sellers to get licenses and more gun buyers to undergo background checks.

WASHINGTON D.C., Jan. 5, 2016 (Xinhua) -- U.S. President Barack Obama speaks during a press conference at White House in Washington D.C., capital of the United States, Jan. 5, 2016. Obama Tuesday unveiled a handful of executive measures on gun control, including expanding background checks, calling for "a sense of urgency" about gun violence. (Xinhua/Bao Dandan)

"Until we have a Congress that's in line with the majority of Americans, there are actions within my legal authority that we can take to help reduce gun violence and save more lives. Actions that protect our rights and our kids," Obama said.